Butterfly House

Discover the secret lives of a captive (and captivating!) group of insects while exploring Delaware Nature Society's Butterfly House at Ashland Nature Center. This mesh enclosure is home to approximately 15 species of butterflies and moths in every stage of their life cycle including monarchs, swallowtails, fritillaries, and anglewings. It is a complete ecosystem, containing food, water, shelter, and caterpillar host plants. Open free of charge (with your paid trail fee) for self-guided visits Mid-June - August

Check website for facilitated Saturday dates in July & August:
